For upstream card networks, MNOs, banks, and FX platforms

Accelerate partner liquidity with zero operational friction

Your African PSP clients unlock T+0 working capital while you settle on your exact existing schedule into a designated DACA lockbox.

Zero changes to your settlement operations

When an African PSP or fintech finances its pending settlement receivables on Eko Securities Exchange, your obligations as the upstream settlement counterparty remain completely unchanged:

- Keep your exact settlement window: Whether you settle on T+2, T+5, or T+14, you pay on your normal contractual schedule. (Phase 2 extends the same workflow to 30–90 day corporate trade payables.)
- Zero fees and zero credit exposure: Settlement partners pay $0 in protocol fees and assume zero credit risk on the PSP's financing facility.
- Zero software integration required: You continue settling via standard banking rails (SWIFT, Fedwire, SEPA, or local RTGS). No blockchain nodes, wallets, or API rewrites are required on your end.

Legal and cash-routing workflow

Step	How it works for settlement partners
1. Notice of assignment	You receive a formal legal notice of assignment confirming that specified settlement batches have been assigned via perfected true sale to a segregated, bankruptcy-remote SPV.
2. DACA lockbox routing	Instead of wiring settlement proceeds to the PSP's operating account, you remit via standard bank wire (or designated virtual IBAN) directly into the SPV's bank-controlled deposit account control agreement (DACA) lockbox.
3. Higher corridor volume	Because your PSP client recycles working capital multiple times per week instead of waiting days for settlement float, your cross-border payout and FX corridor volumes scale substantially.

Why settlement partners welcome Eko Securities Exchange

Pre-funding bottlenecks are the single biggest constraint on African PSP transaction growth. By allowing your PSP partners to monetize verified settlement receivables at T+0, while keeping your own settlement timetable and payment rails untouched, the exchange expands corridor throughput with full legal clarity.
